19	“My school baseball coach? She’s gay, I think? She’s very good at baseball?” The thing with Mom wasn’t just that she was gay. Sam knew that looks didn’t matter—that how someone dressed didn’t prove they were gay or not. Mama was gay, too, but no one would know by looking at her. But with Mom, most people saw her and thought everything about her screamed it: from her short blond hair to her work boots to the old T-shirts she wore while she worked and was at the beach.
29	“If Mom knows that George was supposed to ask her to take him and his friends on her boat, and she finds out he doesn’t want to because she’s gay, that would hurt her feelings, Sam.”
109	The opportunity presented itself on date night. Their moms tried to plan one at least once a month. Mom and Mama were going to a nice dinner, and the kids would be home alone.
169	While Sam was still getting used to which of the two moms was which, she was learning how wonderful a house with two moms could be.
